16.00 – 17.30 Round Table (Room 101)

The New Evolutionary Cultural Economics Paradigm – CULTURE BASED DEVELOPMENT (CBD)

Invited discussants:

Annie Tubadji - Swansea University, United Kingdom

Nigel O'Leary - Swansea University, United Kingdom

Martijn Burger - President of the International Society for Quality-of-Life Studies and Director of EHERO, Erasmus University, the Netherlands

John Hall - Former Vice President of the Association of Institutional Thought and Board of Directors member of the Association for Evolutionary Economics, Portland State University, USA

The discussion will introduce the audience to a cutting-edge development in the economic analysis of decision making and choice with aftermaths for regional development. The discussion will offer a comprehensive overview of the Culture Based Development paradigm (by the author of the CBD paradigm), and critical evaluations of the book and its application in modelling human and AI choice and interaction, and the interplay of reason and emotion in entrepreneurship and regional economics (by leading evolutionary institutional economists, happiness economics and regional economics experts). This round table aims to equip scholars with the CBD paradigm toolkit, beneficial in AI studies and a wide range of socio-economic applications in regional development.

The discussants, esteemed experts in institutionalist and regional economics, as well experts on happiness economics and emotion, will assess the relevance and merit of this novel paradigm within the broader context of institutionalist thought. They will provide insights into the unique contributions of the CBD paradigm and identify areas for further development for scholars interested in applying it to their work.

Interested conference participants are kindly invited to join this interesting round table and be part of a lively discussion about CBD paradigm.
